

HK Table

Krasnogorov Studio

This organic, hand carved table is designed as an efficient, minimalist, architectural structure, much in the manner of Carlo Molino, where there is a pleasing marriage of form and function. As the design developed a surprising resemblance to bones emerged. Skeletons have evolved as wonders of efficiency where strength and speed have been the winning combination. Bones take on a different profile as they stretch out, changing their form to deal with different stresses. Similarly, the tables' organic forms twist and change to carry their load, expanding to make a joint with a mating element.
